WHIPPOORWILL. FOOD OF PREHISTORIC MAN. Experiments Tend to Show He Ato His Pool How. Our attention has recently been called to some curious experiments conducted some time ago by Mr. Chas. White. M. R. C. S., lately the president of the Royal Odontological Society of Great Britain, says Chambers' Journal. Upon examining some skulls dating back from the stone age, he noted that several of the teeth, although quite free from caries, were thickly conted neveral of the teeth, although quite free from caries, were thickly coated with tartar. It occurred to him that it would be possible by a rough an-alysis to identify any particles of food that might be embedded in this nat-ural concrete, and so reveal the char-acter of the aliment partaken of by prehistoric man. Dissolving the ar-tar in a weak acid, a residue was left which, under the microscope was found which, under the microscope, was found to consist of corn husk particles, hairs from the outside of the husks, spiral road the outside of the husks, spiral vessels from vegetables, particles of starch, the point of a fish tooth, a conglomeration of oval cells (probably of fruit), the barblets of down and portions of wool. In addition to this varied list was some round, red bodies, the origin of which defied detection, and many wants. gomery City Postoffice, and he will soon move his family to that place.
